

Redakteursnota

Aangesien ILW reeds 'n dekade bestaan, is besluit om 'n volledige indeks van die eerste tien uitgawes te publiseer. Dit sal sowel 'n alfabetiese as 'n tematies-verklarende indeks wees en sal gepubliseer word as die eerste nommer van Volume 11 (1995). Die indeks is nog in produksie - vandaar die nommer van die huidige uitgawe as Nommer 2 van Volume 11.

Die bydraes deur Henriette Roos, Charles Malan, Ina Gräbe en Gerrit Olivier in hierdie uitgawe is gebaseer op referate wat tydens die XIVde Congress of the International Comparative Literature Association, Edmonton, 15-20 Augustus 1994 gelewer is. Die tema van die kongres was "Literature and Diversity: Languages, Cultures, Societies". Marius Scholtz se bydrae bevat die teks van sy inaugurele rede, Universiteit van Durban-Westville, Julie 1994.

Editor's Note

JLS has been in existence for a decade, and a decision has been taken to publish a comprehensive index to the first ten volumes of the journal. This will take the form of an alphabetical as well as a thematic index, and will be published as the first number of Volume 11 (1995). The index is currently in production, hence the fact that the current issue is Volume 11, Number 2.

The contributions by Henriette Roos, Charles Malan, Ina Gräbe and Gerrit Olivier in the present issue are all based on papers delivered at the XIVth Congress of the International Comparative Literature Association, Edmonton, 15-20 August 1994. The theme of the conference was "Literature and Diversity: Languages, Cultures, Societies". The contribution by Marius Scholtz is the text of his inaugural address, presented at the University of Durban-Westville, July 1994.